

LOOKING FOR LOVE AFTER DIVORCE

How to experience love on the dance floor of life after 30 years of divorce and finding it online!

After a long term marriage of 30 years ended, Ann Reichardt had to begin again and find someone to fit within her life as a 56 year old. She discovered important clues in finding and maintaining relationships for the last third of her life.

Over the past eight years she has personally challenged the notion of what it is like to date in an online era. The many topical issues we all face when finding love again, have given her perspective and valuable insight as to what precautions you need to take in online dating and the pitfalls of finding love later in life.

Biography:

Artist, author, athlete, nurse, mother, lover of nature, performer, creative in thought and productive in life. Ann is a divorced mother of 2. As a retired registered nurse and former educator of the arts, she has produced numerous paintings and graphic prints along with graphite drawings compiled in several children's books as well as poetry. As an author she delves into the human psyche regarding relationships as a young girl and now as an older mature adult, reentering that world of love and romance. The tales are all chronicled in her series of books of midlife self discovery after the dissolution of a long term marriage. With point blank insight and sexual intrigue she questions the notion of finding love after weaving through this new dance floor of love. "The Dance Card" her expressive narrative nonfiction opens her up to vulnerabilities and cautionary tales inherent in modern day romance.
